Malia “Ebun” Santiago is an Afro Latina American Transwomen native of Springfield, Illinois, that spent most of her life in Colorado Springs, Colorado. In 2015, Malia moved to Chicago. Being the oldest of four loved and loving children, Malia has developed a great appreciation and passion for helping others. Although Malia has many passions like singing, acting, making clothes, cosmetology, spending time with friends and family, crocheting, painting and drawing just to name a few, her most harbored and embraced passion is dance. Malia has multiple talents in the performing arts but focuses on ballet, modern and contemporary, liturgical, and Afro fusion. She is also a self-taught dancer showing signs of a dancer at very early ages. Starting on a church dance team, she moved on to choreographing for dance teams around the Colorado Springs area. She joined YEPP in the summer of 2015 and loves that she has found a space where she can use her passion for performing arts to help not only herself but others as well. In 2017 Malia became one of Youth Empowerment Performance Project’s first fulltime staff members. Taking on the role as the Community Engagement Coordinator where she did work to push YEPP’s mission to end LGBTQ+ youth homelessness forward, Malia also obtained and practiced tools that would bring her into higher levels in her life over all. Although she is not presently working with YEPP she still has a great love and appreciation for the work YEPP does. Since then Malia has recently gained her HIV counseling/tester certification along side other community health certifications through The Chicago House Community Health Apprenticeship Program and is aspiring to be apart of an organization that she can use the new skills she has learned in combination with ones she previously possessed to continue making positive impact and change in the world according to her vision of what this world should look like.
